

PRESS RELEASE Take Me Home – Eyra Moon

*Home, take me home
Where thoughts and fears are dying
Home, take me home
Where hopes and dreams are flying*

The track “Take Me Home” was originally created on handpan on a lonely night. Eyra: “For a long time I thought I landed on the wrong planet. I didn’t feel at home and did not at all understand humanity” the artist honestly reveals how the song first was created. “I don’t know one night I was just playing and these words came. Homesick to where we come from, so I thought. It was much later I discovered home lies within and it is my job and responsibility to do it here with all that I am. To bring heaven to earth, into this physical life called human.”

The original acoustic version has not been released yet, but as the song was picked by the Dutch movie “Away From Home” (Uit Huis) for both the trailer as the soundtrack, it developed into an epic version with soundscapes and electronic dream states, with the handpan and Eyra’s voice as leading ladies.

Eyra “I hope my discovery to create a home for yourself wherever you are and in whatever circumstances, will inspire others who do not feel at home on the planet as well. I know doors open from the inside, so whenever it is time it will, but once I saw that where we come from and what is here, is all part of the oneness, life became so much better!”

“Take Me Home” can be found on Spotify and is available on all platforms.
